NOTES FROM THE CHAIR

I take great pleasure in announcing the addition to our campus of an exciting new learning opportunity! UC Berkeley will soon receive each day's full broadcast of Soviet television via the USSR's Molnyia satellite system. Thanks to a generous gift from Mr. Henry S. Dakin's Washington Research Institute in San Francisco, the Slavic Center will be able to record daily broadcasts and to make videotape copies available to interested departments and individuals on campus. The system is not yet "on-line," but we have hired a graduate Research Assistant, Paul Karpuk, of the Slavic Department, who will help plan and initiate procedures for taping each day's broadcast, review the contents of the "master tapes," publish an annotated "Soviet TV Guide" to inform potential viewers of the contents of the master tapes, provide copies at cost to interested parties, and add voice-over English translation to selected programs for non-Russian-speaking audiences. In addition, we will be making frequent tapes available for general-interest viewing at Slavic House and at other places around campus.

It is exciting to contemplate the many ways that Soviet television programs may become a part of our efforts at UC Berkeley to study the Soviet Union. I foresee a multitude of possible applications: language students will have access to examples of contemporary speech and vocabulary; political science researchers and journalism students will be able to analyze Soviet television news reporting; members of every department will benefit from television documentaries relevant to their interests; students of film will be able to watch Soviet TV "Saturday Night at the Movies."

This is a particularly interesting time to be tuning in on Soviet television. General Secretary Gorbachev himself, in his speech to the 27th Party Congress, deplored the "low level" and "dullness" of Soviet television programming, spoke of the potential effectiveness of an improved television medium, and called for boldly and creatively addressing via television both the "achievements and shortcomings" of the Soviet system. Just how the new "glasnost" and self-criticism will translate on the Soviet television screen remains to be seen. Whatever develops, we will be watching!

Our video recording and copying equipment is on order and has not yet arrived, so I will have to ask your indulgence while we get our system set up and going. Campus readers of our "Newsletter" will be notified as soon as we have tapes or tape copies available (our legal advisors inform us that we may give tapes only to on-campus users).

In the meantime, our thanks should go to the many who are making this venture into Soviet television possible: to Stanford University, for agreeing to broadcast the Soviet signal to us off their "state of the art" satellite reception equipment; to Jack Kollmann, Executive Director of our Center, for helping to turn the idea into reality; and especially to Mr. Henry Dakin and his Washington Research Institute for providing the funds for us to initiate this project.

BERKELEY-STANFORD PROGRAM ON SOVIET INTERNATIONAL BEHAVIOR (BSPSIB)

The Berkeley-Stanford Program starts the 1986-87 academic year with a new executive director, Dr. Richard B. Remnek, formerly of Georgetown University. The program's core faculty has been strengthened with the appointment at Stanford of David Holloway, formerly of the University of Edinburgh (U.K.), as Professor of Political Science. An authority on Soviet military affairs, Professor Holloway will teach graduate research seminars on Soviet defense policy and military affairs in the Winter and Spring quarters of 1987 at Stanford. Also, Dr. S. Neil MacFarlane, a leading young scholar on Soviet policy in the Third World, is visiting Berkeley this year, on leave from the University of Virginia, to complete a book-length study on the Soviet Union and Regional Security in the Third World.

WELCOME TO JILL

Please join us at the Slavic Center in giving a warm welcome to Jill Goldsmith who is a new member of the Center staff, succeeding Tracy Wilborn. Jill comes to us from U.C. Santa Cruz where she earned a B.A. in history while at the same time holding a number of jobs, most recently in the Santa Cruz campus personnel office. Widely traveled, she lived in Yugoslavia in 1980-81 as a foreign exchange student where she studied Croatian. While in Yugoslavia, Jill served in the capacity of editor, proofreader and translator at the Historical Institute of Slavonski Brod, and played clarinet in an orchestra which toured Poland, Bulgaria and Hungary. In 1983-84 she studied history at the University of Pau and the University of Paris with the UC Education Abroad Program. We are happy to welcome Jill to our staff.

LIBRARY NEWS

I would like to inform those of you who are new to the Berkeley campus and remind those who are long-time residents of a few services offered by the library to aid its patrons:

ON-LINE CATALOGS: Every Tuesday, 9-10 am (Beginners), and Wednesday, 2-3 pm (Advanced), instruction is offered in the use of MELVYL, the UC system-wide automated catalog. Since MELVYL provides the capability of searching by key-word, it will remain a useful bibliographic tool even after the inception of GLADIS, the soon-to-be active on-line catalog for the Berkeley campus. Meet at the MELVYL training session sign in the Loan Hall, Doe Library.

TOURS: Tours of the Main Library are offered every Wednesday at 3:15, and last approximately one hour. Those interested should gather at the General Reference Desk, Doe Library.

NEWLY CATALOGED BOOKS: Each month lists of newly cataloged books in Slavic and East European languages (Polish appears on its own list) are distributed to the Center for Slavic and East European Studies and the Slavic Department Library, Rm. 284 Dwinelle. A copy is also available in the Slavic Librarian's Office, Rm. 346 Doe Library. All titles on the list are currently available for circulation.

Recent acquisition: Uchenyia zapiski, izdavaemyia Imperatorskim kazanskim universitetom. 1834-1916. [on microfiche]. Please note that this title is still in process. Since the cataloging for this series will be very complex, please contact the Slavic Librarian for assistance.

A short description of your project (one paragraph to two pages) should be sent in advance to the Consulting Service, Department of Statistics, 367 Evans Hall. Fall drop-in hours are Tuesday 10-12 and Wednesday 8-10, Rm. 443 Evans. Individual appointments may be arranged by using the sign-up sheet on the door of 443 Evans.
